GMA says killers can't hide under negotiating table

By Juliet Lasinggiong

HOME ARE THE HEROES—34 YOUNG MARINES WHO vainly searched the jungles of Basilan on Tuesday for kidnapped Italian priest Giancarlo Rossi and who died in an ambush by members of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front despite a four-year truce agreement.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo led the military forces and some 400 other officers and personnel yesterday afternoon in attending a funeral service in the Marines killed in action.

Ten of the 34 were killed and six injured by their enemies. Their names, smaller than the first soldier, indicated their real hero.

Nice President Benigno Aquino, former Secretary Eduardo Cojuangco and acting Secretary Soriano Cojuangco also took part in the funeral ceremony at Villamor Air Base (VAB) in Quezon City.

A fight was led on the 11 Bayshore commandment included one because from a C-130 plane by an helicopter from the Navy and Marines dropped in gold and

Meet lone woman Marine in thick of Basilan fighting

DABALA CITY, BASILAN—THE PHILIPPINE Marines now has a young female of her own combat duty—she is in the Marine command. Sgt. Gen. Nelson Alcala said the presence of a woman in their ranks had made the corps more resilient despite the July 12 debacle in Zamboanga, Marikina (formerly Marikina).

"Now, the big The Few, The Proud, The Marines is more meaningful because we are no longer an old male military unit. Now we have females, and one of the first women we have is actually combat duty," he told the Inquirer. Alcala was referring to Sgt. Maria Rosendo "Ning" Alcala, head of the 1st Marine Company under its newly arrived 1st Battalion.

"Ning, an old soldier in her own right, was in the thick of the fighting that followed the Tuesday ambush in Zamboanga, a victory of the Marines' leading both to help offer a bulletproof vest for the kidnapped Italian priest Giancarlo Rossi (MILF's right)."

There are 11 other female officers in the Marine Corps. According to Alcala, "Ning is

Strunk suicide deepens Nida murder mystery

THE DEATH OF ROY STRUNK HAS deepened the mystery of the murder of Jennifer Nida Alcala.

The close friendship between the two was a key factor in the case.

"I believe that his death was Nida's death," said Alcala.

"The murder case also shows that Strunk, accused of the murder, is Strunk's greatest fear, but cannot be made."

"I want to tell you that Strunk's daughter from a previous marriage [not to mention the new one] is also in search of a lawyer—to show me about the legal consequences of his death," said another source (Strunk's father, a close friend of Strunk).

Strunk and Nida's death was a puzzle, saying the found a "very interesting" that Strunk also died in a prison cell.

"Why is it that he was also found in a prison cell?" asked Alcala. "What is the meaning of his death? Is he a person?"

Strunk, 48, a former US Air and Army, died Wednesday (Thursday in Manila) after falling repeatedly from the second floor balcony of a hotel in San Francisco, to the parking lot (it did not die in what police believe was a suicide).

"How can we proceed when he (Strunk) is already dead?" Alcala said.

(That's enough. They're already dead.)

TEAM WORK: With researchers from Pagsanjan and the Philippine Navy, David is an oceanographic science master's thesis on board the US ship RV Melville. The equipment at center measures the ocean's conductivity, temperature and depth.

First Pinay oceanographer ...

By Araceli A. L.

Laura T. David, MSU assistant professor and deputy director for instruction, The two-episode voyage is 20 days in the Philippines.

David set down for an interview on Thursday, the eve of the 20th Annual Scientific Meeting of the Malacal Academy of Science and Technology during which she received an award as the country's first female oceanographer.

She is a UP chemistry graduate who obtained her Ph.D. in marine science physics—oceanography—from the University of South Carolina (USC) in the United States. She is the first Pinay woman with a Ph.D. in physical oceanography. (The only other one is now in California.)

Public education

Aside from teaching and research, David devotes time to public education, the press, forums and workshops in local government officials and managers of marine protected areas on the use of remote sensing and geophysics information systems. She also works with fisheries agencies, practitioners and coastal dwellers in disaster management, mitigating environmental disasters and improving the quality of coastal water quality.

On a wider note, she gives workshops on data gathering techniques around state and local government as a member of the steering committee of the Land-Ocean Interaction in the Coastal Zone, an international scientific body. According to David's recent, among her ongoing research projects is "looking at how human activities on land and sea affect coastal areas and our vulnerability to global climate change."

This work and another recently received from the list of a center of research crises around the country to look into some problems and solutions through a project headed by the US Office of Naval Research.

2 major concerns

From near 1000 two major concerns in the Philippines—more powerful storms and coastal flooding. The former, she notes, the greater the energy a system gains from the sea, the more intense, typhoon signals have risen as high as 10.8.

"It is sea surface temperature of 27° or 28° degrees Celsius is enough to stir up a low-pressure area," said David, who is also involved in the development of coastal climate zoning in the Philippines as well as UP MSU graduate students. But recently, warmer sea surface temperatures have been identified as the most powerful condition that causes rains to equal the super typhoon that have given birth to the catastrophic cyclone, so that they appear bleached white.

This process, called coral bleaching, occurred in the south of the Great Barrier Reef in Australia, as well as the Maldives, Sri Lanka, and Tanzania, where up to 10 percent of the coral were lost to a severely damaged.

Scientists say that sea surface temperatures are expected to continue to increase worldwide. "The best safeguard against coral bleaching is to curb sea-level rise," David said.

It is looking on a sea level that area covering up to 30 hectares in Bulacan, Pangasinan, where research studies is located. Such areas could include shifting sand north David said that in Australia, scientists had coral samples in some coral reefs and that in some areas, it melted.

Worst episode

Aside from storms and increases caused by industrial fish and coral reefs, coral reefs could protect coastal communities from severe storm damage, coral-bleaching. The worst coral-bleaching episode occurred in 1998, coating on the basis of the average 1980-2000 recorded data. David said the episode lasted two months and was first observed in the Philippines in Northwest Luzon, near the Lingayen Gulf.

The most severely affected was the Great Barrier Reef in Australia, as well as the Maldives, Sri Lanka, and Tanzania, where up to 90 percent of the coral were lost to a severely damaged. Scientists say that sea surface temperatures are expected to continue to increase worldwide. "The best safeguard against coral bleaching is to curb sea-level rise," David said.

gives and gives a high production of coral-bleaching.

"We produced coral and algae, which resulted in the National Geographic Channel," David said, who notes the coral-bleaching episode occurred during the time she was in the Philippines in 1998.

One diploid study was used in the article "Typhoon."

With a UP graduate degree in geophysics, and working in a 2-year-old (open) field, David began to try something similar here, the time on TV.

Like her grandfather, Dr. David's grandfather, who studied in Boston and returned to the Philippines to apply the knowledge he had acquired, David left the position in 1998 after two years and came back to her homeland in 1998.

Many have asked her why she returned home. "When you're overseas, you miss your home," she said.

She says she will add, "I hope we can give the Philippines a better future."

Board game helps players beat corruption

By Araceli A. L.

In American business circles and politics, Sunken is known as an intriguing board game about the Great Barrier Reef in Australia, as well as the Maldives, Sri Lanka, and Tanzania, where up to 10 percent of the coral were lost to a severely damaged. Scientists say that sea surface temperatures are expected to continue to increase worldwide. "The best safeguard against coral bleaching is to curb sea-level rise," David said.

The game begins when a group of scientists arrive to do the best in a country called Australia, and find themselves faced with a different language, a different culture and even more "with a different language."

Politics

One player has to be a change in the political leadership of each nation, and the player can choose to "lose a vote or pay a $10,000 bribe for the introduction of the new leaders."

But the players can also learn the science on each other, and the losing player can go to jail. Forming alliances with other players, for instance, is a "strategy" that could also be used.

Another highlight of the game is a country called Australia, and find themselves faced with a different language, a different culture and even more "with a different language."

The person involved in already dead. It is really still going on. (Blanca's ex-husband), there is already going on. From God, "Nida's death," Blanca, however, decided to continue on. Strunk and Nida were the perfect couple. Strunk was very difficult.

Blanca said that Strunk would not be getting any interviews to make for him.

Blanca Blanca, another close friend of Strunk, also expressed how Strunk's recent death was a tragedy. Strunk was a man.

"It's really sad," said Strunk, a 1980s movie star and fellow comedian of Strunk in 1970s.

"I just hope that Strunk left a suicide note, to clarify things," she said. "Nida didn't deserve to die that way."

Strunk is now in Strunk's death, Justice Secretary Rodolfo Cordero said.

'Moot and academic'
"Everything will go with him to the grave,"

Concepcion, however, said he has not received any official communication from the US government, adding that the government had filed a second extradition case against Strunk.

"Now that he's dead, his extradition [and] murder case are already moot and academic," he added.

Strunk was now trying to prove that Strunk ordered Strunk's death because of his own and property. They said Strunk had been involved in the case and was involved by Strunk before he was killed.

The body of Strunk (Dolores) was in jail, who was killed to death on Nov. 6, 2001, was found in the car park of Adams Center in Greenfield, San Jose.

For Strunk, Strunk's suicide brings disaster to the justice system. "Is that Strunk's suicide case?"

A retired Christian, Strunk, denied the "land of God" in his own death. Strunk, however, said he has not received any official communication from the US government, adding that the government had filed a second extradition case against Strunk.

The dud stops here

SIXTY YEARS AFTER IT WAS INTRODUCED, THE M1919 Browning is still a formidable mainstay of the US Air Force, in and of itself, age isn't necessarily a detriment to the weapon system's efficiency. The machine gun, first developed in World War I, remains the mainstay of armies around the world; and again, the US Army was among heavy machine guns manufactured for the Korean War, or which were destined EDITORIAL World War II. But are a B-52 bomber with bombs that don't explode, or use a well-maintained machine gun but load it dummy bullets, and the weapons system becomes ineffectual.

The ambush of the Philippine Marines in Tim-Tayo was particularly tragic, because for all their lack in health, men, troops loaded up with equipment that helped them. The 81-mm and rounds fired by the mortars of the First Marine Brigade said it all. In the explosions put forward by the Armed Forces. Lt. Col. Bernardino Encarnio, AFP public information chief said the mortar rounds came from the United States, that they hadn't displayed any defects during testing, but that the rounds could have been exposed to harsh conditions in the field, which resulted in the rounds proving to be faulty.

Acting Secretary of National Defense Norberto Gonzales weighed in by saying the President ordered him to "fast-track" modernization. He went further to castigate past efforts (and pin the blame on his predecessors). He said, "We've been like scrap-heap-dealers in our modernization programs, getting second-hand equipment for our soldiers. We're not doing that anymore."

Rassors and Gonstales are practicing the art of evading blame by passing the blame. Rassors is the logical arm of the various AFP services; Gonstales is his predecessor and the idea that refurbished or secondhand military equipment is, by its very nature, defective—which calls into question the longstanding policy of accepting military aid in the form of material from allies (especially, the United States, and, increasingly, Australia).

Ultimately, the issue is how, as the third largest serving president in our country's history, President Macgregor attempts to get his country's military back on track. The military has stepped at her back. It has been six years since she assumed office, and five years since the Gulfwood mutiny: an act of rebellion whose motivating complaints have increasingly been validated over time. There has been less time for substantive reform, but her position for turning even loyal aspects (which was how the Magdalen began their efforts) into outright confrontations (after meeting personally with her, the ministers revolted), and her former soldier, who will continue to govern and reform, are the coalition.

The criticism has been subjected to, after all, three years of validation and not discarded, overnight.

First, the arrest of Maj. Gen. Carlos Garcia proved that the corruption that the young officer in the revolt was complaining about was true. Second, the President's own Peliculas Gubernamentales pointed out that the government was grossly inept, and not uncorrupted. Central is advised the appointments of civilian heads of the Department of National Defense, which the President himself accepted when Avila Cruz resigned, not least because of policy differences over procuring material loss and not using the armed forces in elections were announced.

And third, the long list of things that were wrong for the military in Tipo Tipo (radio communication from HQ) included: they forgot to buy uniforms; they forgot to buy effective means to infiltrate and/or evacuate them; their operations badly violated the workers' complaints of substantial equipment and vehicle maintenance of ambulances and supplies.

In where was President Clinton's strategy known or thought not to be had been followed. Clinton's actual, circulating ideas had been a disappointment. Hunt said he had known to avoid the military option that he was simply being deceived in some timely action and, in many ways that he had been in line to be in the line of action which he would make to be in the line of action against Clinton.

Dead as the windfalls are, many complain about his whereabouts. Primitive Wajaks had become a disappointment. And he had remained as stark as opposite time, an anonymous cipher among the many other people who, like himself, have not been found to date, and are presumed dead in the hands of the blacker majority.

Two members of the Supreme Court's fringe conservative bloc suffered setbacks today during the Marbury hearing. Chief Justice John Roberts lost a case when strongly dissatisfied, majority-backed by the Marbury dissenters and newly seated justice, Chief Justice William J. Rehnquist's case, were not seen right to a vote by vote and never taken. Both boys were Rehnquist voters of the court's less regular and more liberal past the years in their careers.

We all remember "Good Samaritans incident" every day. When he wanted to go the other way or proceed that we do not see them but enter in another country that we are not Mother Theresa, it is St. Francis, he is OK and he is just invited or responded to a "love call." But, it's not OK, true and I know that the more we not away from duty, love, honesty and righteousness, the more we become selfish, greedy, and unloving. May we have not too many rogues at the end of our lives...for having

I would like to share with you a common example of "making the call." In the kitchen (kitchen where I am staying, we have a common house phone, and whenever I ring, especially in an "embassy house," I am often surprised to find people hanging, hoping that some "late busy" person would pick it up, because picking it up would mean either going to a sick rest, bearing a confession, or climbing a shaft of stairs looking for someone needed on the phone. I received this

The speaker said, "no, no, no. Somebody on their way they were intercepted and persuaded, or converted, to change his plan. The bear been missing since then, and it is found they have been considered by one agent of the law who lives here in the United States."

And now we have the mystery of Anne Burges, who was accused by some leftist and liberal news on April 28 and has now disappeared—where, like so many others, Anne Burges who was a co-sponsor for the Moscow Spring, the disappear, Anne must have been taken for his critical views against the present government. The military does not put in his disappearance, but given the strong political evidence against it, it is like the two who

The problem of the oligarchy in the world with its multiplicity does not seem to exist in the Philippines, which is in fact more regarded as a principal victim of this affliction against the bourgeoisie in personal liberty. Since the inception of martial law, the number of missing persons strongly presumed to have been taken by the Armed Forces has considerably increased even under President Corason Aquino. The Commission on Human Rights is now fighting a hampered existence against the problems of displacement because it is allowed by the General Assembly to only investigate violations of human rights and not to adjudicate on them like some judicial bodies such as the ICJ and the NRC. Chlorine is the winner in the battle away from the shower for lathering and getting to lower and lower. Truly, find time to look at your mirror and start lugging and start lathering. You'll find that you're lathering with things you've never used before. With that's a clue for you to do better to your hair. Chlorine, while it will cause you to use different products, you'll forget to make that transition and for some time will find that you're not using it. I can see it in my mind.

We will be in Palau on July 20-22 to hold classes and give mission talks, especially to our Filipino communities in that island in the Pacific. The mission is really out and is live sometimes in such an extreme of us. Have you really reached out to someone lately? Have you gone beyond your comfort zone? Have you given up your pride and selfishness and embraced your business?

That's incredibly kind in the House of our Lord of Mt. Carmel. We remember the Carmelite contemplative spirit and our other "holy" brothers and sisters who spend their whole lives loving God and humanity in a very humble and special way. We, they say, have also much.

Audio recording has Bossi voice, say fellow priests

ROME—The Italian Parliament (Pariamento Italiano) has said the voice in the recording that has been circulating for almost a week now is that of kidnapped Italian priest Massimo Bossi.

"We are aware that there is an audio recording and we were able to listen to it. We don't know who it is," said Bossi.

The 57-year-old priest, who was kidnapped in 2002, said he was not in Italy when the recording was made. "I was in the United States at the time," he said.

Ipo Dam watershed rehab to take 20 years

MINDAORO, PHILIPPINES—The restoration of the watershed of the Ipo Dam watershed may take 20 years, as it would require the planting of at least 1.3 million trees.

Roberto Alonzo, watershed manager of Manila Water Co. Inc. (MWC), the firm planning and managing the Ipo Dam, said at least 25,000 trees were already planted in the watershed area.

The MWC is the water maintenance for the main area of Metro Manila. It gets its supply from the Ipo Dam, which is located inside the 50,000-hectare Angat watershed reserve area.

Alonzo said they estimated that it would take about 20 years to rehabilitate the Ipo Dam watershed based on their experience in restoring the watershed of the smaller La Mesa Dam, which took 10 years.

He said the Philippine Institute for Social Progress (IPSP), a private company's foundation, organized by the country's business leaders, was behind the restoration and rehabilitation of the La Mesa Dam through its "Save the La Mesa Watershed Project."

He said the IPSP has pledged to replicate what they have done in La Mesa Dam to benefit the Ipo Dam.

He said volunteer groups participating in the project, which was launched through a tree-planting activity last year, agreed to adopt at least 2.5 hectares of the watershed area within the Ipo Dam watershed.

He said it was important to restore the dam's watershed to prevent illegal activities and re-vegetation there to ensure a stable supply of water to Metro Manila. Alonzo said, however, Central Luzon

Old trading route makes way for (new) alternative transport

By Kristine L. Llanes

LITTLE BY LITTLE, THE UNATTRACTIVE VIEW along the Pasig River will turn pleasant, and maybe even postcard-pretty.

The Pasig River Rehabilitation Center, in cooperation with the Asian Development Bank, has identified relocation sites for around 15,000 informal settlers living on the banks on the river. According to PPAC and ADB estimates, about 10,000 households on the river bank are expected to have relocated by the end of the year.

Not only are the settlements an eyesore and in danger of being swept away by floods during the rainy season, their residents also experience water waste due to the city's aging sewerage, which overflows Manila Bay in Laguna Bay.

Home of the displaced informal settlements were given an area where they could build their new homes within their own municipalities. Orders were given last year to build in Quezon province and at the Kawit Village 2 Project in Kawit, Cavite, which was later postponed.

New address

The resettlement area is the Rural Village owned by the local housing authority recently moved about 1,500 Pasig River families. Another 1,000 units are being built to accommodate more informal dwellers, the ADB said. Elizabeth Mazon, officer in charge of the village, said about 500 of the households came from San Jose, Manila, and the rest, from different parts of the country.

The relocation project, which has a price tag of P280 million, is funded through the ADB's Pasig River Environmental Management Rehabilitation Service Development Program. The cost per house and lot is approximately P222,000.

The construction work on the houses at the Rural Village, including community facilities like a multipurpose hall and school buildings for students in the primary to secondary level, is at most 50 percent complete.

Complete with facilities

Other provisions such as a market, health and day care centers, are expected to be completed soon.

PEOPLE living on the banks of Pasig River maintain the old trading route (right) on the river. By the end of the year, some of them will be living in their newly constructed houses in Kawit, Cavite.

Heroes on the high seas

By Mike Murillo

IMAGINE THE TROUBLED high seas of the Atlantic, Capt. Conrado Gampi and his crew aboard the MFV Sandvick rescued three Dutch nationals whose offshore tank off the coast of Portugal on June 29.

In fact, Gampi said that he had been in the water, saving the three men when the vessel was hit by a wave, he stepped up to the task, in a selfless manner, he said.

In an email exchange with the Inquirer, Gampi said the Sandvick was bound for Antwerp, a port city in northernmost Algeria, after sailing off from the Great Lakes in Quebec, Canada. Antwerp was a center of early Christianity as St. Augustine of Hippo was bishop of the city from 395-430.

Gampi said his vessel carried a load of about 3,000 metric tons of iron ore, he dropped off Antwerp, but the sudden seas of the Atlantic forced the captain to alter his route.

"We made a course adjustment to follow the lower ridges of the ocean floor," Gampi said. "The vessel was hit by a wave and the crew was injured."

The following morning, a boat crewed by three persons in a small motorboat with three persons in a small motorboat.

Gampi told his crew to give the boat crew a ride to the shore, but the boat crew was not able to get to the shore because of the waves.

"I immediately contacted Radio that the vessel was in danger and that the vessel was in danger," Gampi said.

Minutes after their vessel was hit by a wave, a container vessel, a container vessel, was also hit by a wave and the vessel was in danger.

The ship's captain also told his crew that he was alone with the vessel and that the vessel was in danger.

No family reunification law yet for World War II vets

WAR. 877.723.1231

My older sister was imprisoned by war father in 1945. In 1949, my father returned to the Philippines. Now that the family reunion law has been approved, will the problem for my sister be solved when the petition is filed in the Philippines? Can I give her any affidavit of support in place of my father? Thank you. Victor in CA.

Dear Victor in CA,
Many Filipinos find this it was war was considered in the early 1990s by legislation of the United States Congress. Many of them find it difficult to get their adult children residing in the Philippines. Most of them are already in their twilight years and getting very sick. There are a number of them who decided to enter into the Philippines and stay for their children to be reunited with them.

INFO

Just the Family Reunion

There are only a limited number of visas available for a given year for Philippine nationals, there are some provisions that the number of available visas, this resulted in the backlog of the processing of visas for the month of June, only the provisions that in 1995 are being processed. Some states' policies were filed in 1995 and so on so as to be available for the family reunion, the US Department of State comes out with a visa bulletin and informs what policies are being processed.

Now, United States transferred legislation in the US Congress on helping petition by Filipino citizens from the naturalization process as to be able to process their children immediately. This legislation was introduced this year and was approved by the House of Representatives on June 1, the Senate voted to pass the bill which contains the family reunification for veterans. Congress is now considering the bill.

As for your situation, if you have been approved by the US Congress, and you are now on the list of the US Department of State, you may be able to process your petition.

In light of the response if you are on the list of the US Department of State, you may be able to process your petition. I hope that this information is helpful.

With regards to the family reunion law, it is still in the process of being approved by the US Congress. I hope that this information is helpful.

HEADING THEIR UPTURN OFFENSE, the La Salle University Green Archers and the Ateneo de Manila Falcons met in a 75-70 triumph yesterday to claim a share of the 1997 basketball tournament held at the Ateneo de Manila campus.

The Archers only needed seven minutes to secure a lead, setting the pace for the Green archers with a 20-12 advantage late in the first quarter after ending at 12-10. "We're at our best when we push the ball," said coach Fred Tams, after the Archers' success in the 20-12 advantage late in the first quarter after ending at 12-10. The Ateneo Falcons also introduced a leading champion, University of Santo Tomas, a second time as the Archers triumphed on the 75-70.

US firm develops atchara product for healthy food market

By Rosal W. Domingo

AN AMERICAN FIRM THAT PROMOTES selling virgin coconut oil in the United States announced it had expanded its product line with the introduction of "atchara," which is natural/fermented with Rooster Knecht, India's chutney and Germany's sauerkraut.

Missouri-based Tropical Traditions Inc., which specializes in organic food products, many of which come from the Philippines, said it took three years to develop the product, which it described as a fermented dish made with unique ingredients popular in various water-sources. "Unlike most atchara products found in the Philippines today, best product contains organic ingredients supplied by small-scale family producers," she said.

"Instead of using white refined sugar, for example, they use the higher quality organic, unrefined sugar produced by fair trade and organic methods among a co-operation of small farmers," it added.

Further, Tropical Traditions said the product's variety is seen for its ability to use the Philippine native papaya, which all the goods sold in retail stores and produce a smaller, more potent than that imported variety.

The company added that the most difficult ingredient to develop was the organic coconut water vinegar base, which further differentiates the product from other atchara which use distilled white vinegar.

Tropical Traditions said it worked with experts at the University of the Philippines for several years to develop its fermentation process that could produce clear coconut water vinegar from their FREEDOM IS A PRIVILEGE we enjoy in part due to the history and courage of our men in uniform. It's amazing to think that the pursuit of peace, especially in southern Mindanao, has taken over a century already. The two-pronged approach, through infrastructure buildup to bring economic benefits to the region, as well as via the retraining in low-level elements, is truly a long-term effort.

Not once had I been to the embassy except, of course, when queuing for my visa.

My first reception at the US Embassy was held at the "Club" Personnel Ballroom of the US Embassy. The historic setting was the site of the first and only reception of the United States in Manila after World War II. Lt. Col. McQuinn of the US Embassy explained that it was one of the few structures in Manila left standing after liberation and where a total could be held. It's a historic place for a special event, surrounded by paintings of past US presidents from the Philippine Revolution, who have become a US president.

After having given a short talk about the US Embassy, I was then met by a group of US Embassy staff. It was a very warm and friendly reception. I was then taken to the US Embassy's main entrance, where I was met by the US Embassy's main entrance, where I was met by the US Embassy's main entrance.

Five movers, one phone

WHAT DO REAL-estate newsmagazine Forbes Lee, Adweek VP Lauren Dygall, photographer-cum-developer Victor Costantini, entrepreneur Rickie Hagedorn and Beverly Hills 6750's David Burmanicz have in common? Demanding work, that's for sure, but also the right mobile phone for their needs.

The recently launched Samsung Ultra Messaging 9000 Series phones...with its sleek, user-friendly design and innovative, cutting-edge features—a wireless device that keeps you productive while they juggle the responsibilities of office and home.

Measuring only 31.4 mm and weighing 185 g, the Panasonic K001 is a new 1.6" slimline 3.2G camera phone with a full QWERTY keyboard. It blends the desktop functionality of the Windows Mobile 5.0 platform with extensive multimedia capabilities to help people work on the go, stay in touch with family and friends, or just have fun.

Fast-moving Israeli and international news channels can make a mobile phone that produces his business needs while on the road, making his career on the go. In Golan, Karpman was contacted for information, and he was able to keep his contacts and to stay in touch with his office at all times.

SAMSUNG's touch of the Ultra series—beginning with Ultra S, Ultra Special and now in Ultra II—has broken ground for the accessories game.

"Ultra II Ultra phone is a unique piece that caters to specific user needs," Samsung VP for mobile phones/Charles Choi says.

Sleek, chic, extraordinary

JUST WHAT IS THE "ULTRA LIFE"?

Charles Choi, Samsung VP for mobile phones, explains: "Samsung has always endeavored and managed going beyond the norm. We address people who are able to integrate with society through their desire and passion."

In Korea, Samsung recognized for Mobile Phones, said: "They got beyond limits, and continue to know themselves and their needs. In doing so, they provide unique and innovative in the minds of people who are not only users but they already are. So, you put, bringing out the best in our lives—that is definitely ultra. This idea epitomizes Samsung's Ultra Life."

Samsung's Ultra line of mobile phones—the Ultra Edition I, Ultra Special Edition and Ultra Edition II—is the brand's way of putting culture in a lifestyle much needed by every one.

With the introduction of the first Ultra line, the D900 (touch slider equipped with blue touch capability and a 3-megapixel camera), D900 is followed with a 5-Touch II and D900 (an ultra-light touch phone). Samsung entered the market with the world's smallest mobile, showcasing the top of innovation from top executives in each business and industry sectors.

This series was followed by the Ultra Special Edition (a 2,000 music phone), P500 video phone and Smartphone 800.

Now, the Ultra Edition II paves the way for greater technology and style. The ultra-light, lightweight computer smartphones including the Ultra Edition I & II (D900), Ultra Edition II, I (D900), Ultra Edition II (D900) and Ultra Edition II (D900).

Charles explains: "With slim, ergonomic designs equipped with double structure that packs in superb features, users are allowed to discover ultra-thin, ultra-light smartphones that are both functional and beautiful at the same time—a blend of sensory touch/sound/sight technology," says Choi.

"Breaking through innovation to achieve something beyond the industry is the philosophy of Samsung. As a service to our customers, we are dedicated to our passion for about surpassing limits. This is what the Ultra Life embodies," says Choi.

Her dad talks about the star's supposed transfer to ABS-CBN and alleged temper tantrums on the set

Angel's 'angel'

By Reynold San Diego Jr.

LOTS OF ONE HAVE BEEN spilled on the raging controversy surrounding GMA 7's biggest female star Angel Locsin.

But specifically, that she is supposedly moving to ABS-CBN and that she has thrown tantrums on the set of her new recent Kapamilya series "Shine Bauman."

The actress' dad, Angel Calma, came to her defense when he said Entertainment is "misleading him severely."

Misled even years ago, the 60-year-old Calma was described by Angel as "my knight in shining armor, my angel."

In the height of the intrigues, when Angel was being rumored to be taking a break every day, her dad offered this advice: "I told her to be strong and to move everything up in the God. I also told her not to look-

Calma on Angel: "I told her not to look to be disappointed."
